Leadership is not the same as authority.

--Leadership on the Line

Leadership is an art. Great leaders rely heavily on process, perspective, and relationships. "When a flower doesn't bloom, you fix the environment in which it grows, not the flower." Leaders develop a craft, a set of skills that support teachers in every aspect of their interactions in school, especially change. In this full-day workshop, participants will refine their craft. They will understand the impact of change; identify resistance to change; and develop a host of strategies to embrace change, develop relationships, build relationships, and strengthen relationships.

Tracey Calo is currently the Assistant Superintendent of Grafton Public Schools. During her tenure as the Assistant Principal of Nashoba Regional High School, Tracey served as an instructional coach and presenter. Tracey's expertise and experience in curriculum, instruction, and assessment have enabled her to present dynamic professional development workshops on several contemporary educational topics: brain-based learning theory, formative assessment, differentiating instruction, and professional learning communities.
